Year: October 2002 to May 2004

Employer: Newcastle Literacy Trust

Position: Project Coordinator

Responsibilities: Duties include the daily running of a community based Skills for Life Project in the East of Newcastle. This involves managing four members of staff consisting of an ESOL worker, two literacy development workers (under 16 and post 16 specialists) and an admin worker, maintaining learner records, identifying relevant learning resources and maintaining the project's budget. Promotion of the project throughout the area via telephone calls, letters, emails, meetings and presentations to develop networks and partnership working. The development of positive partnership working, and a multi-agency approach to identify training and development needs of the community. Designing databases to record learner information and the writing of quarterly reports and delivering quarterly presentations to inform of the project activities. As well as the daily running of the project, I am also responsible for designing and delivering tailor made one-to-one literacy sessions in community venues.

Year: December 2001 to October 2002
Employer: Newcastle Literacy Trust
Position: Literacy Development Worker

Responsibilities: The daily management of a community based literacy development project. This included designing personalised learning materials and delivering innovative literacy sessions, on a one-to-one basis with hard to reach young people aged 16-25 living in North West Newcastle. The sessions were delivered in informal community settings, for example, youth groups and libraries, which were close to the young people's homes in order to maximise involvement and participation. The assessment of an Individual's literacy abilities and the development of an individual learning plan, reflecting the identified needs were negotiated with each learner. Where possible, qualifications and/or employment routes were identified and attained. Client records and programme outputs are monitored to a high standard at all times. Raising awareness of the project in the area and the development of partnership working in order to realise project success. In addition, throughout this contact, I was also responsible for delivering basic skills awareness sessions to organisations on a national level.

Year: July 2001 to December 2001
Employer: Nexus
Position: Schools and Community Liaison Officer

Responsibilities: The position involved visiting schools and community groups throughout Tyne and Wear and advising on health and safety issues relating to public transport. This included group assembly talks, PSHE sessions, the history of transport, safety issues for women and one-to-one sessions with persistent offenders on public transport. Furthermore, I was responsible for identifying possible projects to sponsor, developing these projects, monitoring budget expenditure and delivering this information to management bodies via reports and presentations.

Year: April 2000 to January 2001
Employer: IQ Corporation Level 1, 153 Sturt Street, Southbank, Melbourne, VIC 3006.
Position: Education and Training Officer

Responsibilities: Identifying the basic education needs of unemployed people aged 16+ in the St Kilda district of Melbourne. This was achieved through a bottom-up process, allowing the target group to define their learning needs, through individual and group discussions. Building upon the successes of existing programmes and introducing new ideas, appropriate courses were then devised and delivered to match these identified needs, promote employment prospects and help reduce barriers to progression. These included: literacy, communication and IT skills. In order to ensure project success, a strong network of partner organisations had to be developed and maintained, for the purposes of gaining knowledge from other experts in the field, building upon the success of these projects and locating individuals in the targeted group. This was achieved through liaising with a range of organisations including: community and youth groups, libraries and career services, via meetings, letters and telephone.

Year: July 1999 to January 2000
Employer: ETC UK, 119 Norfolk Street, North Shields, Newcastle Upon Tyne, UK
Position: Trainer/Facilitator of Research Methods and Training Methodologies

Responsibilities: Training of ten employees in approaches to data collection and analysis, from focus group interviews to questionnaire design. Responsibilities included the delivery of research methods, together with the development of various teaching and training methodologies. The contract concluded with the production of an in-house training manual style guide for future trainers.

Year: Sept 1998 to July 1999
Employer: Aberdare College of Further/Higher Education, Cwmdare Rd, Aberdare, UK
Position: Lecturer of Sociology/Social Research

Responsibilities: Creation, delivery and management of an 'A'-Level curriculum to 55 students. Responsibilities included new and innovative curriculum development to attract students, the screening of applications via telephone and letter and the guidance of successful applicants from enrolment to graduation. The delivery of the UK National Curriculum: Oxford/Cambridge Board, in both Sociology and Core Skills, e.g. communication, written language, information technology and numeracy. Various teaching methods were employed throughout including: audio visual aids, Internet – open and distant learning sites and traditional enthusiastic lesson delivery. I was also involved in developing the colleges outreach centre, which provided informal education to young people aged 16-25 in the area. Courses ranged from basic skills provision, to 'taster' courses, which were designed to introduce people to the range of courses available in the college. In-depth qualitative research, through focus group interviews, was performed throughout the duration of the contract, into the problems encountered by females aged 20 –25 when attempting to return to education.
